frank's surprise was great it seeing a stranger's face upon the pillow, and he rushed to the foot of the steps and called out, "Jessie, where are you?"

No response came, and he ran swiftly up the steps to find the one he sought lying in marble beauty on the floor, while a red stream trickled to his feet.

"Ho hee killed her?" he gried made."

"He has killed her!" he cried, mad with despair, and lifting her tenderly, bore her to the light where he looked in wild haste for her wound.

The pretty arm was all larcerated and torn, but no other hurt could be discovered. With a great sigh of relief he placed

"Engaged!" cried Jessie, rising upon her elbow, while a sudden flush spread upon her cheek; "I thought you were engaged to Frank Graves."
"Oh! no;" with a soft little laugh, "he is in love with—some one else."

Jessie lay down again with quickened liventh.

"You know who it 18, Jessie. Now don't you think, dear, you made a great mistake in preferring Whitney De Yane to one so noble and manly as Frank Graves?"

"Indeed, darling, he does not," cried Frank, coming forward at this juncture and taking her in his arms; "look at me once and see."

"Forgive me for eavesdropping," he

"Forgive me for eavesdropping," he begged, a moment later, when Jessie's tears had been kissed away. "Miss Dollie and I have been carrying out a preconcerted plan for days, and I could not resist being present to hear what you had to say in answer to her remarks this morning."

Jessie was too happy not to forgive anything to her handsome lover, and all through the future years she spent with him felt a keen sense of gratitude.

JESSIE'S AWAKENING

BY JENNIE S. JUDSON.

"Rather uncouth, is he not?" asked Whitney DeVane of his cousin Jessie

"I had never thought of him as such," nswered Jessie; lut when a moment later she compared Frank Graves, the subject of their remarks, with this ele-gant, city-bred cousin, she thought the description might perhaps apply.

Frank lived on the adjoining farm, and Jessie had known him from early

Jesse felt a little stung at this care-less reply, and the color rose swiftly to her face at the intimation it contained. Her cousin leaned gracefully against a tree awaiting her, during this con-versation. "Could be have heard Frank's remark?" she asked herself.

Thank heaven! I've managed to get rid of that boon," the courtly Mr. De-Vane said to himself as he entered his room that night; "he promised to be the greatest chatacle to my plane."

Jessie had gone to the woods one day, a short time afterward, to gather ferns

A furtive gleam of distrust in the eyes which hitherto had only cast on him admiring glances, served to further confirm his purpose of carrying out his ulans that day.

"I didn't mean to hurt the little fool," the muttered, "but it couldn't be helped."

"Hist! some one is coming from the outside. I'il get out of this while I can. Little devils, they've delayed and the warted me after all."

The sound of horses' extra rapid, approaching caused him to hasten, but he

This welcome arrival quite changed
Jessie's plans, and it was hastily de-cided that Mrs. Barnes should accom-pany her husband, and the two girls stay at home.

The day passed all too rapidly, and late in the afternoon they betook themselves into the parlor to play duets and sing until the early twilight fell, when supper-getting was in order.

"Don't you feel a raid to be alone, Jessie?" asked Dollie, once.

"Oh, no, mamma and papa will come back on the eleven celock train; and we can put a lamp in the port-hole win-

"Jessie, I hear footsteps," said Dollie, in a low tone; "let us go quickly and look all the house. It may be some tramp who knows we are alone."

The girls acted hastily upon this suggestion, and the front and back doors were closed and barred simultaneously as the two men issued from the barn.

A torent of muttered curses greeted the sound of the closing doors.

"They suspect something," whisered Douglas. "Are you sure there are but two of them? I heard some one answer from up stairs a while ago when to one of them called,"

VOICES FROM THE GRAVE,

Singular Experience of an Ohio Woman Whose Husband Has Been Dead

Twenty Years. [Washington telegram.] A telegram from Toledo relates the story of a firmer in Monclova, Ohio, who died and was buried thirteen years ago but is still writing to his family. The Sunday Capital prints a story quite as remarkable, ins follows: "A very remarkable case has come to my attention through a friend in the Pension Office, which furnishes incidents for a novel as powerful as any Dumas or Eugene Sue ever used. In 1804 a Lieutenant from an Ohio village was killed in one of the battles in Virginia and his body was sent home, buried with military honors and a handsome monument erected over it by the citizens of the place. Thousands of people paid their tributes of honor to the young here and looked upon his face as the body lay instaits in the Town Hall. He left a widow to whom he had been married only a year, and for more than twenty years she has been trying to get a pension; but, atthough she keeps fresh flowers upon her husband's grave, she can not prove that he is dead. The records in the Adjutant General's office are perfect, and ns follows: "A. very remarkable case has ers upon her husband's grave, she can not prove that he is dead. Two letters never come from the same place; now they are postmarked in Gotordo, then in Texas, then in New York. Once she got a note from him dated at Wishington. He appears to know what is going on at home, and always alludes to local occurrences with a familiarity that is amazing. He sends messages to old friends and gives her advice about business matters which it seems impossible for a stranger to know. She can not answer these ghostly missives, because he never gives any clue to his whereabouts, and no detective has been able to find him. Her friends believe that the writer is some crank or malicious person who takes this way to annoy her, and the distress the poor woman suffers cannot be measured by any other human experience. good record .- Detroit News. -About one year ago the Pacific Express Company was robbed at Peru, Ind., the express messenger being gagged and valuables taken. A reward of $1,500 was offered for the arrest and conviction of the robbers. Detective Pat O'Neil, of Detroit, was employed on the case, and succeeded in bringing to punishment the perpetrators, D. W. Downer, "Little Al," and Bert Lewis, the express messenger. Payment of the reward having been refused, E. F. Conley, of Detroit, brings suit against the Pacific Express Company for $2,000 damages, being the reward, with interest and expenses. The suit is a novel one, being probably the People who get their idea of the mill from the establishments outside of the lumber regions have little idea of the capacity of the mills in which lumber is manufactured. One of the great mills in the Michigan lumber district will handle from 1,000 to 1,500 logs every day. The mills will probably average 5,000 logs a week or 20,000 logs a month. All the ingenuity and energy of the lumbermen has been directed to the quick handling of hese logs or the rapid turning of the rough material into lumber. They have so far neceeded that each mill will turn out from 80,000 to 110,000 feet of lumber every day. Every contrivance that can aid the men in handling and turning the logs or in turning out lumber has been pushed to wonder
